RUTTER HOBBS & DAVIDOFF SPONSORS 10TH ANNUAL “BIG SUNDAY” COMMUNITY SERVICE EVENT

Local Law Firm Supports Largest Annual Citywide Event May 3-4

LOS ANGELES (April X, 2008) – Los Angeles-based law firm Rutter Hobbs & Davidoff Incorporated announced its plans for its continued participation and sponsorship of Los Angeles’ 10th Annual “Big Sunday” event May 3-4. In addition to the firm’s role as a major financial sponsor, Rutter Hobbs & Davidoff representatives – from administrative assistants to attorneys – will donate their time to support the nation’s largest annual citywide volunteer event, benefiting over 300 nonprofit programs locally and internationally.

The firm’s project for the day entails “Helping the Hungry,” which will include compiling food and toiletry kits for families, creating arts and crafts with children, packing supplies for refugees in Sudan, writing letters to the military in Iraq, packaging baby supplies for families in need and more.

“Participating in ‘Big Sunday’ was an enriching experience for our firm last year. It gave us the opportunity to interact with a diverse group of people, and gave us a sense of pride by helping make a significant impact on the less privileged in our local community,” said Brian L. Davidoff, managing director of Rutter Hobbs & Davidoff. “It is interesting how by giving as a group we get stronger as a firm. Our firm is pleased to lend a hand again this year, and we look forward to the camaraderie that our entire team and their families will undoubtedly share this year through our participation.”

Ten years ago, David Levinson, a Los Angeles-based full-time writer, started “Big Sunday” with just 300 volunteers. Now, Levinson and his team lead the largest city-wide volunteer weekend in America, with “Big Sunday” engaging over 50,000 volunteers in 2007. Big Sunday is entirely nondenominational and apolitical, and despite its massive size and scope, it is a nonprofit organization still run predominantly by volunteers. The event, celebrating its tenth anniversary this year, is dedicated to helping worthy charities throughout the Los Angeles area.

About “Big Sunday”

At its core, “Big Sunday” is more than a day of volunteering – it’s also about community building. The event uniquely cuts across every social barrier, bringing together thousands of people of all races, religions, ethnicities and socioeconomic backgrounds from all over Southern California. “Big Sunday” takes place on one weekend each spring, and has involved over 50,000 volunteers of all ages, from preschoolers to seniors. Volunteers originate from over 100 different organizations, including churches, synagogues, temples, mosques, schools, companies and other groups –and work at hundreds of nonprofits on over 300 projects. Projects are designed for anyone, accommodating all age groups and schedules, with projects lasting from one hour to the whole day. For more information, visit www.bigsunday.org.
